

Product Stewardship

March 12, 2008

This program is to educate participants in the current issues, regulations, drivers and thinking surrounding product stewardship.

Product stewardship is sometimes described as a product-centered management practice intended to ensure health, safety and environmental protection over the life of the product. These considerations include designing, manufacturing, marketing, distributing, using, recycling and disposal of products.

Topics Include:

- Product lifecycle analysis
- Stewardship program elements and implementation
- Legal considerations, regulations, guidelines and other standards
- Role of the EHS professional
- Managing the process
- Interacting with product users
- The Responsible Care® program
- Case studies and outcomes
