Training Health & Safety Professionals: OSHA Training Institute

May 21, 2003

The Institute is a new state of the art facility devoted to training OSHA staff, federal and state personnel, and the public. The program will include:

- A tour of the facility and its teaching laboratories.
- A discussion of the training resources available through the agency.
- Means for measuring training effectiveness.
- Determining training needs and priorities.
- Key elements for successful training
- Lessons learned.
- Private sector resources.
- Using student feedback.

Learn from an organization that trains thousands of students about health and safety matters each year.
